4.1 Introduction

- Value of intellectual property much greater than value of media
 - Creating first copy is costly
 - Duplicates cost almost nothing
- Illegal copying pervasive
 - Internet allows copies to spread quickly and widely
- In light of advances in information technology, how should we treat intellectual property?

Tired of being treated like a criminal for sharing music online?

You're in good company. Over 60 million other music fans use peer-to-peer programs like Kazaa and Morpheus to share their favorite tunes. Yet the record labels are bullying ISPs and hunting down college kids in an effort to shut down file sharing.

Isn't it time for a new approach? The Electronic Frontier Foundation thinks so. We believe the answer lies in a model that fairly compensates artists while supporting music lovers. Join EFF today so the music can play on.

What Is Intellectual Property?

- Intellectual property: any unique product of the human intellect that has commercial value
 - Books, songs, movies
 - Paintings, drawings
 - Inventions, chemical formulas, computer programs
- Intellectual property ≠ physical manifestation

Let's step back from IP and consider basic property rights...

- Locke: People have a right...
 - to property in their own person
 - nobody should be allowed to enslave you
 - to their own labor
 - to things which they remove from nature through their labor
- As long as...
 - nobody claims more property than they can use
 - after someone removes something from nature, there is plenty left over

Property Rights

This position is not uncontroversial:

- Pierre-Joseph Proudhon: “Property is Theft”
 - "The liberty and security of the rich do not suffer from the liberty and security of the poor; far from that, they mutually strengthen and sustain each other. The rich man’s right of property, on the contrary, has to be continually defended against the poor man’s desire for property."

Do you think property is a right?

If so, should the right have limits?
