

Disclaimer

- 1. I am Indian (like obviously)
- 2. These are stereotypical depictions of the Indian society
 - a. But.. Stereotypes are often founded in empirical wisdom
- 3. I am far detached from this and acknowledge my privilege
- 4. Not here to make light of the societal "challenges"

Background

- Segregation of the sexes
- Parental oversight (overreach ?)
- Large joint families
 - Often under one roof
- "Honour"

Stage I: Dropping Hints

How aunties jump to conclusions after hearing a gossip about you

Privacy? What privacy?

I grew up in a desi family, we all are in everyone's business all the time

Stage II: Pestering

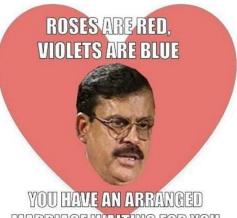

- Relentless inquiry to find out if you're seeing someone
- Meaningful looks and sighs
- Random aunties asking uncomfortable questions
- Even worse: you dad asks you about your GF/BF & & &
- Younger siblings recruited to spy

Stage III: Despair and Resignation

Stage IV: Formation of a Search Committee

- Association of Bored Aunties and Uncles
- 2. Create accounts on matrimonial websites
- 3. Calculate Dowry
- 4. Arrange headshots

Stage V: Screening Process

- 1. Define (reasonable) search parameters
 - a. Income
 - b. Family income
 - c. Caste etc.
 - d. Colour of skin
 - e. Citizenship
 - f. Education
 - g. School attended
 - i. IIT > BITS > NIT >>> rest
 - ii. IIM above everything else
 - iii. IIT + IIM = □□♣
 - h. Number of siblings

Stage VI: In-Person Interviews*

* Chaperoned. By extended families from both sides. Obviously. Like Duh!

Stage VII: "Dates" a.k.a getting to know him/her better *

^{*} Not in the biblical sense

Stage VIII: Finalizing the Contract (Engagement or roka ceremony)
